Study Material

You learn using language through proper structure and punctuation. These help us deliver our message meaningfully that people can understand. Knowing all types of sentences is important as it will help in using some appropriate phrases for conveying a clear message with the right tone.

What is a sentence?

When a group of words are joined together to make a complete sense is called a sentence. Sentences are basically of 4 types:

What are the Most Common 4 Kinds of Sentences?

1. Declarative/Statement Sentences

This type of structure helps in making statements and stating basic information. You can also express an opinion using them. It is the most common type among 4 types of sentences and is prevalent in most academic writings and verbal speech.

Examples:

Students failed to complete their essays on time.
My wife loves eating cake in the morning.
The developer needs new resources for completing a project.

2. Exclamatory/Exclamation Sentences

You use an exclamatory type to express deep emotions or feelings, and it must be finished with an exclamation point. Rarely do you need to use this type in formal and highly objective writings.

Examples:

I got an A in my research paper!
That movie was exciting!
I can't believe how fast that car was moving!

3. Imperative/Command Sentences

You use it when giving demand or instruction. A period puts in the end, but in some cases an exclamation mark might be used. This can either be negative or positive depending on a message.

Examples:

Do not stop!
Never speak to me like that again.
Please leave your shoes outside.

4. Interrogative/Question Sentences

This type is simple to understand as it helps in asking a question. You use a question mark at its end. For framing your question, choose words like "why," "what," "when," "where," "do," or "how."

Examples:

What time will you finish writing your English homework?
What is an adverb?
How often do you read this article?
